With every purchase through our Point of Sale (POS) system, the Moscow Food Co-op benefits from vital data regarding product inventory and sales that helps us improve selection, availability, and pricing. When you use your ownership number, the POS system associates purchase data with your number. Using your ownership number also allows us to apply owner sale prices and discounts to your purchases and to track patronage so that dividends can be calculated and distributed when available. We will never give or sell this information to any individual or organization.

Every member has the right to a hard copy of our bylaws and attached patronage dividend consent provision upon request; these documents are also available on our website: www.moscowfood.coop.

Equity investments are at risk. In the case of the dissolution of the cooperative, equity investments are not refundable.

The Primary Owner is responsible for all updates and changes to account information. Please sign below to acknowledge that you have read and understand this information.
